

During the summer, Kunsan Air Base welcomes a large number of new Wolf Pack warriors. While newcomers experience multiple briefings educating them on the “ins and outs” of Kunsan, some important items can be forgotten or overlooked. This spread is dedicated to assisting those individuals who are new to the Pack.

Welcome to Kunsan!

Staff Sgt. David A. Collins, dedicated crew chief, 35th Fighter Squadron, 8th Fighter Wing, Kunsan Air Base, calls for help as the simulated unconscious First Lieutenant Daniel J. Munter waits to be extracted from his F-16 during the Beverly Bearcat Operational Readiness Inspection here in March.

Keeping in touch with family members

Postal service: The Kunsan Post Office is the Air Force extension of the U.S. Postal Service in Korea. With some exceptions anything that can be legally mailed in the U.S. can be mailed from military Post Offices in Korea. Special services such as registry, certified, insured, return receipt and money orders are available for purchase.

Morale calls: Servicemembers may make six 15-minute morale calls each month. Morale calls may be made from Kunsan by dialing 782-5497. Morale calls may not be placed Tuesday-Thursday 6-11 a.m. (local time) and during operational readiness inspections or exercises.

E-mail: The commander's policy at Kunsan allows and encourages people assigned here to use e-mail for personal communication. E-mail is available in most offices and can also be connected to dormitory rooms with an existing phone line. For more information on Internet service from home, call 782-7392.

Curfew

Military personnel residing permanently or temporarily on Kunsan AB must be on Kunsan AB no later than the start of curfew hours; Sunday through Thursday nights; 12:30-5 a.m., and Friday, Saturday and holiday nights;

2:30-5 a.m. U.S. military personnel may, however, remain off base overnight or on weekends on an infrequent basis, but may not reside off base unless authorized in writing their unit commanders.
